

GERIATRIC INTERDISCIPLINARY TEAM CONFERENCE

Geriatric Interdisciplinary Team Conference is a lecture series targeted to meet the learning needs of an interprofessional group of faculty members and fellows. The series is designed to enhance the learner's understanding of a range of interdisciplinary geriatric syndromes and to aid in the development of an increased knowledge of pertinent topics of today, including: causes of common medical problems in the elderly, symptoms, diagnosis, treatment and prevention options, risk factors and complications.

Directions to RowanSOM Stratford campus may be found on our website at: rowan.edu/som/njisa

After attending Geriatric Interdisciplinary Team Conference, participants will be able to:

1. Explain the role of interprofessional care and the importance of assessing physical, mental, social, and functional domains in maximizing quality of life.

2. Utilize the latest evidence-based findings in the prevention and treatment of common medical problems and co-morbidities in the elderly.
3. Prevent iatrogenic complications associated with pharmacologic treatment of the elderly.
4. Interpret scholarly research articles, determine the reliability and significance of statistical results, and apply key findings to clinical practice.

RowanSOM is accredited to provide Category 1-A credit by the American Osteopathic Association. This program is approved to provide 28 hours of AOA Category 1-A CME credit by the AOA Council on Continuing Medical Education.
